COMPENSATION LAW PROVES POPULAR

Rapidly Superseding Employers'
Liability Laws in United States.

Washington, March 28.—Workmen's compensation laws rapidly superseding employers' liability laws as a method of dealing with the results of industrial accidents, according to the Federal Bureau of Labor, in a report today.

The report says that twenty-three States have enacted workmen's compensation laws, and that these acts have thus far been declared constitutional by the courts of last resort in Massachusetts, New Jersey, Ohio, Washington and Wisconsin. However, in Montana, because it permitted double liability, and in New York because it was held to be in conflict with the State Constitution. Later in New York, however, a new law was passed, which avoided unconstitutionality.

The report says it is worthy of note that no country has ever returned to the liability system after having enacted a compensation law. "While some desire is expressed in certain quarters to deal with the problem by a uniform measure, it is apparent to the most casual observer that the rapid movement of the past few years is likely to continue its progress until the rule of negligence of the employer and the assumption by the employee of all risks of accidents, herefrom is superseded by the more humane and equitable doctrine of making the industry provide for the human, no less than the mechanical, breakage and wear and tear."

HUMAN LABORATORY INSTEAD OF JAIL

Mental Treatment for Husbands
